An American View of Edmonton

The following article is taken from Ingenook, an American magazine published at Elgin, Illinois. The editor himself wrote the article and it is the work of one well qualified to know whereof he speaks.

"By the time one gets to Edmonton, a town of not far from five thousand people, he has arrived at the jumping-off place so far as the railroad is concerned, and yet there is nothing whatever about the city as we call it, to indicate to one that he is out of the United States. The architecture is the same. There are the plank boardwalks of all western towns, the forest trees, the telegraphs, telephones, electric lights, stores and homes almost identical with any northern town in the United States. In fact if you look rounder were to be instantly whisked to Edmonton without knowing where he was he would not know that he was out of the United States at all.

"Now, Edmonton is practically two hundred miles north of the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway, and yet it is one of the most interesting cities in all Canada. The vast country that lies back of it, all the way to the Arctic Circle, is tributary to Edmonton. At one time it was a Hudson Bay trading post and there is a Hudson Bay store there now. And if you imagine a town reached by a railroad and having a back-door trade extending for two thousand miles to the north, you will have Edmonton. It is at the top of a high hill, at the bottom of which is the Saskatchewan river. Across the narrow valley is another high hill, on the top of which, exactly opposite, is Strathcona town. When you leave Calgary you will change cars at Strathcona for Edmonton. The fare is fifteen cents and the road winds down the hillside, across the river, to the base of the hill right under Edmonton.

In this valley vegetation is rank. The trees are not large, but they are so close together, and are so enlivened by wild flowers when the writer was there, the first of June, that he could not help noticing the similarity between it and the tropics. The closely matted vegetation, brightly flowering, rich soil, and the heavy growth, all the result of the recent rains, strongly reminded the writer of some of the vegetation and surroundings in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico. It may sound out of the ordinary, but it is nevertheless a fact.

"The river is a wide and rapid one, navigable for small steamboats. Its sands contain gold, though not in paying quantities, and the hills around Edmonton are full of coal. Thus we have a condition, almost without parallel, of a town of nearly five thousand inhabitants, in a well-wooded country, with coal worth three or four dollars a ton at the terminus of a railroad, with two thousand miles of country between it and the north. In the course of the next four or five years there will be another railroad from the east to the west, parallel with the Canadian Pacific, and striking Edmonton. Then the road from Calgary to Edmonton will be extended northward, and while Edmonton will cease to be a terminus it will become a center. And the Nookman predicts that in the future Edmonton will be a great city. While it is on a transcontinental railroad, while it has one of the richest agricultural countries in the world to the north of it with the river at its base, and coal in its hills, there is no reason on earth why Edmonton may not become a really great city in the near future. For five or ten years ago fifty miles on all sides of Edmonton public land is already taken. To the north is what is known as the Peace river section and from this point, Edmonton, through to the Peace river country, there is a continual stream of daily immigration, and while for many miles all available homesteads have been taken, yet there is plenty of equally good land for sale cheap, and if any Nookman wants to see a new country in the process of empire building, let him go to Edmonton and strike northward, either on foot or with team. For just as the country around Omaha, Nebraska, was forty or fifty years ago, so now is the land north, east and west of Edmonton.

"The land available for agriculture is said to extend at least five hundred miles north of Edmonton, and it is a tremendous country for wide open for the homesteader. This section represents the largest available body of agricultural land open to settlement to civilized people in the wide world. The Ingenook does not advise its readers to go to Canada, nor does it advise them to stay away, but if you do go do not fail to see Edmonton and the Peace river neighborhood. There lie countless fortunes and doubtless many failures. As in every other part of the known world, everything will depend upon the man, but the conditions for success are all there."

WEDDING AT THE PORTAGE

Portage La Prairie, August 20.—A pretty and fashionable wedding took place yesterday afternoon in Knox church. The contracting parties were Miss Ella Sparling, daughter of J. W. Sparling, and J. W. Kelly, of Winnipeg, vice-president of the J. H. McLean company. Miss Opal Sparling acted as bridesmaid, while C. J. Campbell, of Winnipeg, assisted the groom. The Rev. George Arnold, R.D., performed the ceremony. After the service the guests proceeded to the residence of the bride's father, where a pleasant reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly left by the C.N.R. train for the east, where they will spend several months visiting relatives and friends.
